CONTRACT LET FOR BELT LINE

Illinois Centrl Will Build From Trice Farm to Hopper Place.

FORBES IN BIG DEAL.

Will Move Wagon Factory to New Belt Line and Enlarge.

Three months ago the Kentuckian told its readers that, at the proper time, it would make known an enterprise that would for surpass anything yet conceived since the construction of our last line of railroad. Two weeks ago we stated that the construction of a belt line from the I. C. railroad to the L. & N. was just as sure as the rising of the sun the next day. No doubt some thought the assertions were merely the vapors of an idle brain. Now we are going to prove our assertions true.

The negotiations have all been concluded and the contract for grading the road has been let to Mr. Upshaw Woolridge.

Everybody will want to know who is going to build the belt line. The Illinois Central Railroad, one of the leading corporations in the United States, is to be the builder and has signed a contract in the past few days to do so.

Mr. J. T. Harahan, the 21 Vice President of the I. C., not long since in a conversation with gentlemen of this city, who are the original projectors of the belt line, said that he wanted to take Hopkinsville into partnership with the I. C. and in building this road said he would virtually be doing so, and his road would spare no expense to encourage different industries to be located here, as his road would be benefited thereby. Mr. Harahan is everywhere recognized as one of the most competent railroad men, and has, to a great extent, contributed to making his system one of the largest and most important in our republic. What he says goes, and this belt line is now a most positive certainty.

The belt line will start at the first mile-post on South Main street, crossing Virginia street between the home of Mr. G. B. Underwood and what is known as the Knight property, running north of the property of Dr. Williams and touching the L. & N. or rather within 5 feet of it at West 18th street. What is known as the Hopper property, south of 18th street, was purchased last fall by Mr. John B. Bell Jr., and the road will run through this property, as well as the Knight property, which was also bought by Mr. Bell about a year ago.

All the property to be traversed by the road belongs to Messrs. J. H. Anderson, John H. Bell, Jr., and Ford L. Wilkinson and embraces 65 acres. This affords 13,000 feet of railroad frontage and will be held for different industries already contemplated and prospective, to say nothing of the 500 acres contiguous thereto.

This scheme has no connection whatever with any street railway project and is entirely independent of it or any other scheme or person. It means more for Greater Hopkinsville than anything that has been talked of or conceived. It means more for the building up in business population and general development than all other schemes projected or dreamed of.

Messrs. Bell, Anderson and Wilkinson have been busy since last summer in consummating their plans for securing this great enterprise, knowing full well that other great things would follow in its wake. They spent their own money for traveling expenses and everything else, having but one object in

DENMARK'S KING IS DEAD.

Lived to Be 85 And Was Father of Many Rulers.

SON SUCCEEDS HIM.

His Grandson Recently Ascended The Throne of Norway.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 30.—King Christian IX. of Denmark, died here yesterday. He was 85 years old, and had been reigning since November, 1862, succeeding Frederick VII, his kinsman. He will be succeeded by Prince Royal Frederick, who is 62 years old. The latter will probably assume the title of Frederick VIII.

The late King Christian is the father of nearly all the reigning houses of Europe, his son, George I. ruling in Greece; his daughter, Dagmar, being dowager empress of Russia; his daughter, Alexandra, being Queen of England, and his grandson (son of the Prince Royal), Charles, ruling Norway as Harkon VII. His wife Louise of Hesse-Cassel, died in 1898; He has a daughter Thyra, Duchess of Cumberland, and a son Prince Waldemar who refused the crown of Bulgaria.

Prince Royal Frederick married the Princess Louise of Sweden, and one of their daughters married Prince Charles of Sweden, while their son, Prince Charles, became ruler of Norway when the country renounced allegiance to King Oscar of Sweden.

The eldest son of Prince Royal Frederick is named Christian, after his grandfather.

The king passed away quietly at 4:30 o'clock. He was surrounded by the Crown Princess and their children and the Dowager Empress of Russia. The news of his majesty's death spread with great rapidity and signs of greatest grief were seen everywhere.

JOINER-HARDISON.

Popular Young Teachers Wedded Sunday.

A wedding that came as a complete surprise to the many friends of the young couple was that of Prof. Robert Tennon Joiner, of near Lafayette, and Miss Maud Hardison, of Kirkmansville, which took place Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. B. F. Hill. Both young people enjoy a wide acquaintance and are quite popular, both being efficient teachers in the county schools.

Prof. Joiner is one of the most learned and popular young educators in the county, and has taught with great success several of the leading county schools. He was principal of the Lafayette school in 1904-5, and is now teaching at Herndon for the second time, having received a flattering call to teach the present session, on account of his very efficient work in the school there several years ago. He is a son of the Rev. Isael Joiner.

His bride is quite pretty and is a young lady possessed of many lovable traits of character and is very popular in North Christian. She has just closed a school at Haley's Mill.

Mr. and Mrs. Joiner will reside in South Christian.

A PROMOTER OF GOOD CHEER.

THE WAY SOME PEOPLE AFFECT OTHERS.

"Well, I know how a dog feels when he shows his teeth and bristles up the hair on his back," said a school teacher to another. "That's the way I feel every time I see Miss Statham. I've added to my morning prayers. From meeting Miss Statham, I feel as if I were a dog with her ears a glow over my whole day. Yes, she is our school and I'm not the only one who wishes she wasn't. If she could be somewhere else, I wonder if Dante hasn't anything in his inferno about people who make you want to fight. If he hasn't thought to have. By just talking peace she'd arouse a spirit of martial ardor that would conquer the world."

"Yes, I know I'm bitter, but to would me right before the children that school was not the place to wear diamonds. I know it is not, but I've seen her with them to wear, to tell the truth; but how could I help it, when there was no one at home to take care of my poor little pig? Anyhow, children like to see pretty things, and then, it was none of her business. A person like that is enough to ruin anybody's disposition, I say."

"Why, Willie Stevenson, I know Willie Stevenson, the little mother's only boy. Well, Willie was in the office the other day, looking as determined as a soldier. It seems he had been absolutely refused to pick up a paper from the floor, and he was fussy to see him with his jaw set and his eyes flashing. Poor Mr. Sawyer was worried to death. He knew Willie was all right, yet he knew, too, that discipline must be maintained, so there he was."

"Willie was at last induced to speak and he said, half-sobbing, 'I pick it up if he asked me to, even if I didn't do it; but I ain't going to do it when he says I must.' And I honored him for his pluck, which I must say will turn out to be there it is! She can make even her little fight."

"Why, do you know, she's a promoter of lying? Yes, you needn't look so far as that. She's a promoter of lying. You know how I loved California. Well, she began to praise it, and in an instant, like a panorama, I saw all the sagacious little features of the country, until that moment I had entirely forgotten them. I saw myself holding my hat with one hand and my skirts with the other, as I went down the street, and I was with my teeth chattering. I actually felt the damp clothes I put on every morning. I was again in the room with the others of my party, huddled close together, on and on the gas lit for warmth. When I was there, I thought all those things funny. We had the very jolliest kind of a time, telling our day's experiences, and those chitzy rumors. But only the wish to contradict her was uppermost in my mind."

"And Chinatown! I really hated it; but when she denounced it—well, to hear me then, you would absolutely think the ambition of my life was to live in one of those oriental, balconied houses with lanterns to roam the quiet streets and to pass my spare time at the grotesque theater. I'm glad my mother didn't hear me. She'd think I was losing my chances for heaven."

"Then she has such a superior air when you tell her a joke. She looks as if you hadn't the normal amount of intellect when you think of her. It is funny. No one else being near, one day I showed her some sentences written by one of my boys. He was to incorporate 'plum' and 'sinner' in sentences showing thought. He wrote: 'Tom Thumb had a whole plum pie. He had a sinner.' She said she couldn't see anything funny about that; and when I explained that I explained that he probably meant Tom had a 'clinch,' she asked what that was, and then said she was surprised at any teacher laughing at slang used by a child."

"You remember how poor little Jimmie Davis, who lives in the alley, loves to adorn himself with anything in the shape of jewelry that he gets hold of? Well, the other day he came to school with a brass ring on his first finger. All the way upstairs he held his hand spread out on his breast, so no one should miss the sight of his treasure; and when I pretended to look over his head, he accidentally, of course—bumped against me. When I laughed at that she said it was disgusting. Do you know what she made him do? Throw it into the waste basket! Yes, she did. But when I saw him crying, going downstairs, I went and fished it out (she wasn't in the room) and gave it to him. I warned him not to wear it again in school, except at recess and noon. I don't care whether it was right or wrong. Heaven's jewels couldn't have been more precious to him than that ring; and if his hands are dirty it makes no difference. I think such people as Miss Statham ought to be suppressed."

"There she is now. Let's run. Pretend you don't hear her."

"Oh, good morning, Miss Statham. No, I didn't know my dress was sagging in the back. How kind of you to tell me! By the way, how dreadfully becoming that hat is to you! People with tall noses couldn't have been more precious to him than that ring; and if his hands are dirty it makes no difference. I think such people as Miss Statham ought to be suppressed."

"There, wasn't that awful! I'll be meaning my ugly disposition all day, but I just can't help it. She always makes me feel like that."—Chicago Daily News.

Is This So?

"Pa, how are laws made?"

"By men."

"Are they made?"

"No, they are made by political machinery."—Detroit, Free Press.

Kentucky Farmer Missing.

Henderson, Ky., Jan. 28.—Floyd Sights, a young farmer who lives near here, has been mysteriously missing since last Friday, when he rode to Henderson on horseback and told his wife and child he was coming here on business and would return that night. Nothing has been heard from him since. Mrs. Sights is greatly worried over the disappearance of her husband. Sights is a man of good habits and his family relations have always been pleasant.

True stories of important movements and a good, healthy combat are the dominant traits of McClure's for February. Even after the post behind the curtains afforded by the sessions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and of the legislative insurance investigation, and by the upheavals of last Fall's political campaign, there are disclosures in this number concerning railroad abuses, life insurance juggling, and political trickery which will take hard hold of every citizen. There is the case of Everett Colby, "The Gentleman from Essex," told by Lincoln Stephens, which is full of the sturdy sort of honesty and youth. It shows how a young man, with aggressiveness and a conscience can beat the machine to a standstill and wins for himself more than the machine dared give him because he was honest. Ray Stannard Baker, continuing his series, "The Railroads on Trial," tells the astonishing story of how Armour, through his private car line, monopolized the fruit transportation business of America, practically told the railroads that they might as well burn their own refrigerator-cars, and turning to the shipper reaped a golden harvest by daring and open methods. Then he writes of the revolt of honest shipper against Armour.

At a meeting of the Democratic District Committee for the Second Congressional District of Kentucky, held pursuant to a call of the Hon. R. B. Bradley, chairman of said committee, in the city of Madisonville, Ky., January 18, 1906, the following call was issued:

It is hereby ordered that a primary election be held in all of the precincts of the several counties composing the Second Congressional District on Saturday, May 19, 1906, for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Congress in said district to be voted for at the regular November election, 1906. Said primary election shall be held under the provisions of the Kentucky Statutes regulating primary elections, between such hours as regular State elections are held.

No candidate in said primary shall be allowed to elect as a device the device of the Democratic party. Each candidate desiring to be voted for at said primary election shall on or before 2 o'clock p. m., April 19, 1906, file with the chairman of the district committee his written request to have his name placed on the ballot for said primary election and shall state whether or not he desires his name to be printed under any device, and if so he shall designate the device so desired by him.

An assessment of $2,500 is hereby fixed for the purpose of defraying the expenses of said election, to be paid by the candidates, and each candidate shall on or before 2 o'clock p. m., April 19, 1906, pay to the chairman of said district committee, his proportionate part of the expenses for holding the said primary election.

The right to vote at said election shall be limited and restricted to those who affiliate in good faith with the Democratic party and who pledge their support to the nominee of said election, and possess the qualifications prescribed by statute, provided, however, that persons under the age of twenty-one years on the day of said election, but who will have reached said age by the date of the November election, 1906, and who wish to affiliate with the Democratic party and will pledge themselves to support the nominee of said primary election, shall be entitled to vote.

Should there be but one candidate complying with the requirements of this call, after 2 p. m., April 19, 1906, there shall be no primary election held under this call, but the Democratic District Committee shall meet upon the call of the chairman at such time and place as he may designate and declare the person complying with the requirements of this call the nominee of the Democratic party for Congress in the Second Congressional District of Kentucky, and the chairman of said committee shall return to him his entrance fee.

The candidate receiving the largest number of legal and qualified votes cast at said election, shall be declared the nominee of the Democratic party of the Second district for representative in Congress.

The District Committee will meet in the city of Henderson, Ky., at 2 o'clock, p. m., on Wednesday, the 23rd day of May, 1906, for the purpose of canvassing returns and issuing certificate of nomination.

In testimony whereof, witness our hands this 18th day of January, 1906.

A ROUMANIAN

WEDDING.

Cosma was a powerful man, heavy set, with piercing, steel-blue eyes and heavy mustache. A rough man was Cosma, ever on his horse's back, a rifle across his lap, and a long knife stuck in his belt.

I am an old man and have traveled through many a land and seen much, but the like of Cosma I have never met. He was of medium height, bony, sun-burned, looked like the average man, yet was unlike any of them.

In those days our country suffered many tribulations; Turks and Greeks devastated our Roumanian land, and our people lived in misery and fear. Sad times they were! Cosma seemed the only human being exempt from suffering, going and coming without a thought of to-morrow. All fled before the enemy, but not so did he. Taken prisoner, they put him in chains; these he cast off, as by magic, jumped on his horse and fled.

It was written in the stars that none but a silver bullet could harm him. No such man lives in our time; those were the good old days. You may have heard of the other hero, the son of the Maid with the Golden Hair? Well, he stole in Wallachia, on the other bank of the Mlecar river, while Cosma plundered in the Moldavia. At nightfall they would meet and exchange their booty. No gentlemen ever caught him, for his horse was the fleetest of the fleet, and their bullets whistled powerlessly about his ears. He lived in the forests, knew neither pain, fear nor love. The hour when he should know the latter was drawing near.

At that time the estate of Vulturesti belonged to a Greek, Nicola Zamfiride. Near by, at Frasin, lived the beautiful Roumanian, the widow Sultana. Nicola vowed she should be his, but all efforts seemed futile; neither sooth sayers nor witchcraft were powerful enough to help him. Was he unsightly, misshapen? On the contrary, he was a proud Greek, brown-eyed, black-bearded, tall and handsome; yet in spite of these physical attractions she would none of him.

One day Nicola sat in his room cogitating. He was thinking of the young widow. Why did she reject his wooing? "A few nights ago I hired a gypsy, who sang a touching serenade under her window, but the house remained dark and silent. What must I do?" Nicola reflects: "I am well to look at and have a clear mind; why then does she scorn me? She has no lover, for I have had the house watched, but no one has been seen to enter." Nicola loses his temper. As he steps into the courtyard he sees a groom carrying a horse. "Do you call that a well-carried horse?" he bellows; and with that he lashes the fellow with his whip. The groom, who he finds resting in the shade, fares no better.

But what avail venting one's fury on innocent parties? He strolls into the garden and lies down under a linden. Sadly, autumn winds are sighing and golden leaves, like butterflies, flutter to the ground. An old man enters by the garden gate. "Vasili, Vasili, come here!" "What wouldst thou, master?" "Vasili, thou hast ever been faithful; neither the old soothsayer nor the gypsy's witch have been able to help me; I have but you to look to. Vasili, the Sultana must be mine." "I might counsel, but dare not," replied Vasili. "Here is a ducat; speak." "I know my master will find my counsel worth two, yea, three ducats. My advice is that the master ride to Frasin and carry the Sultana off by force." "I will do as you say, Vasili. Here are two ducats."

That very night Nicola, accompanied by six sturdy young men, reaches Frasin. The castle seems shrouded in gloom. By means of rope ladders Nicola and his fellows scale the outer walls. As they enter the open gatecries: "Help! are heard. A door opens and there appears the Sultana, radiant in flowing hair and soft white garments. She turns her glowing eyes on Nicola, who, before she said himself, attempts to throw his arms around her.

"How dare you! And now I see it is only the worthy Nicola, when I had feared to face a band of robbers." Suddenly she strikes Nicola's head with the flat of her scimitar blade. He is stunned. His men rush to the rescue. One is wounded, the rest take to their horses. By this time the alarm is sounded and the Sultana's servants come rushing in. Nicola gains his horse and reaches Vulturesti more dead than alive. All that night he tosses and moans: "Wretch that I am! Ah, woe, ah, woe, is me! Such a woman! Such eyes! God have mercy on me!" He calls Vasili. "Vasili, my faithful one, I have come back covered with shame and disgrace. Vasili, I'll give thee three ducats if thou'll counsel me once more."

"Yea, master, I know it all. A superb creature, the Sultana; but I also know that my second counsel will be worth five—six ducats."

"Speak, Vasili, speak."

"When my master wins the Sultana he shall want to give old Vasili six times—yea, twenty times as many ducats. I will bring Cosma Racoare; he will do your work."

At the name of "Cosma Racoare" Nicola starts. "Be it so," he mutters.

On the third day after this interview Cosma appeared. He was clad in a close-fitting fustian, heavy boots and a Russian cap well drawn over his head. His rifle slung across his back and leading his horse, he leisurely and sullenly approached Nicola, who sat under the linden smoking his pipe.

Vasili whispered into Nicola's ear: "Look at him, master; that fellow will fetch you the devil himself."

Nicola stares at Cosma; then the latter says: "God be with you."

As if waking from a dream, Nicola answers: "The same with thee."

"Thou knowest what I ask of thee; well, then, what is thy price? Will fifty ducats satisfy thee?"

"Yes," answers Cosma.

"Vasili, go fetch my money pouch—"

"No, not yet; when I shall have accomplished my task you can pay me. I bring you the woman; you pay me the money."

So saying, Cosma walked into the garden, wrapped his cloak about him and threw himself on the grass.

"He seems the right man for my work; a weight is lifted off my heart," murmurs Nicola. As night drew near Cosma tightened his stirrups and mounted his horse. "Await my return in the meadow, master," and away he flew like an arrow.

The full moon flickered through the fog, enveloping hills and forest in a gossamer shroud. Only the clatter of the horse's feet broke the dead silence. On reached Frasin he rode the outer gates locked. After repeated knocking a voice from within cried: "Who is there?"

"Open the gate," thundered Cosma.

Then, impatient at the delay, he calls out: "It is I, Cosma Racoare!" A light is seen flitting by, then the sound of voices, and at last the bolts are withdrawn. Cosma enters. He finds the house door open. "A woman without fear," he mutters. His steps resound through the long, dark corridor.

A door is then open and there stands the Sultana, radiant as before, clad in white, and flowing hair, her hand clenching the scimitar.

"Who art thou? What seekest thou here?" she cried.

"I came to carry you off and take you to Nicola Zamfiride," answered Cosma.

"So this is thy errand!" she said, scornfully. "Beware that the fate of Nicola do not befall thee."

Cosma draws nearer, gives a slight twist of her wrist, and the weapon falls to the ground. She shrinks back in dismay and calls out: "Gabriel, Nicola, Foader, help!" They come no farther than the entrance. Cosma lays hold of her arm, but she frees herself and snatches a dagger from a table.

"What are ye gaping at, ye cowards? Advance and bind him!" "You are wasting words, fair lady. I admire your courage, but it avails you naught."

Then the servants were heard to whisper, terror-stricken:

"How may we bind him? It is Cosma Racoare, the invincible." "Ye wretches!" she shrieks, and in her fury attacks Cosma. He catches her in his arms, takes both hands and pinions them with a leather strap.

"Make room!" he cries, and all step back. Quietly he leads her out, the while muttering to himself: "What a superb creature! Such eyes! Such pride! Nicola has chosen well."

The Sultana glares at her terrified vassals and realizes her captivity; she meets the dark gaze of her captor and bows her head.

"Who are you?" she asks.

"I am Cosma Racoare."

She sees fear depicted on the faces of her people. Now she understands all.

Cosma mounts his horse and places the Sultana in front of him. Away they sped. To Cosma it seemed as if he were flying through infinite space on a phantom horse. Now and then he would murmur: "Such a glorious woman!"

The moon shone radiantly. The Sultana turned her head and looked at Cosma.

On they sped, her dark hair falling in ebony waves about her. She trembles and feels his eyes burning into her soul.

"Why do you look at me? Why do you tremble? Are you cold?" On, on, they fly. Suddenly vague shadows are seen flitting hither and thither in the distance.

"What is it?" she whispers, faintly.

"Your master, Nicola, awaits you there."

Suddenly, with a spasmodic wrench, she frees her wrists and before Cosma has time to regain his wits she takes the reins out of his hands and turns the horse's head. Her left arm clasps his neck and her head rests upon his breast.

"I will go with you; do not take me to him," she sighed.

With lightning speed they turn back, leaving no trace behind; on, on, to a safe haven in the mountains.—Translated from the original of Michael Sadoveanir for the New York Evening Post.

AMERICAN SINGERS ABROAD

How Vocal Artists of the United States Are Received by Audiences in Europe.

To most singers who have sought recognition abroad there is but one drawback to the European career, says the Theater Magazine. It is not love of home that lures them back to the United States—it is money. It looks fine to put "de l'Opera" or "de l'Opera Comique" on one's visiting card, as is the habit in Europe, but there is another side to it. Many a debutante has sung at the Opera Comique for nothing, some have paid and some have had the magnificent salary of 200 francs a month just shy of $40. One of the most prominent debutantes at the opera saw 5,000 francs paid over for her debut, and one of those who were there two years as a regular member of the troupe earned 6,000 francs a year ($25 a week) and she was considered favored. Cities like Bordeaux often get debutantes at 300 francs ($80) a month, and in theaters of that sort singers provide their own costumes. So it is small wonder that having got one's education one wants to earn money in the United States. The great wonder is that every one wants a place in America in the front rank, at very many dollars a minute, and lacking that, would rather stay in Europe on nothing. There is, of course, an explanation for this. Once bitten by the pesky microbe of continental life—well, the disease is incurable. There may come a Nemesis. Many a foreigner has turned eyes to America and is learning English, to sing in English opera. Only one thing will save the situation for the Americans—the Europeans have not the voices in the rank and file.

Ample Grounds. Jones—My wife was the making of me.

Brown—Can't you get a divorce for that?—Judge.

Imitations Pass. It is the Real Thing that has to prove its identity; the clever imitator will pass without question anywhere.—Puck.

The Weather.

For Kentucky: Fair and warmer Thursday.

The Supreme Court has issued an order staying the mandate in the Jim Howard case until March 2.

The new king of Denmark will be known as Frederick VIII. He is 62 years old.

Senator Pettus, of Alabama, who is 80 years old, has announced his candidacy for the term beginning more than three years hence.

Congressman David H. Smith, of the Fourth District, has announced his candidacy for re-election, reconsidering his former decision in the matter.

Ex-Gov. Preston H. Leslie, of Helena, Montana, addressed the General Assembly yesterday. He was Governor of Kentucky 35 years ago and has since been Governor of Montana. He is now 85 years old.

Some months ago a woman had her pet dog buried in Cave Hill Cemetery, Louisville, and the owner of the adjoining lot brought suit to compel the exhumation and removal of the poodle's remains.

Dr. and Mrs. John H. Dye, of Louisville, were struck by a Southern train near Louisville, while crossing the track in an automobile and instantly killed. A dense fog caused the collision.

A noisy sample of Tom Drewry's fervid oratory enlivened the House proceedings at Frankfort Monday, in denying the corruption in Louisville politics. A Covington pot called the Louisville kettle black.

Senator Campbell, of Paducah, has introduced a Senate bill looking to securing uniform legislation upon trust questions. It provides for the appointment of a commission, other States being invited to send commissioners.

Burglars entered the house of Rev. Dr. E. L. Powell in Louisville and stole a clock for $400, about $16 in money, two gold watches, and jewelry of no great value. This is the fourth time within thirteen months that Dr. Powell's residence has been robbed.

The Capitol Committee has agreed to recommend $250,000 for the new capitol, which will have the heating apparatus to be added later. The original appropriation of $1,000,000 has proven altogether inadequate for the extravagant ideas of the imported architect.

Thomas G. Watkins, for 21 years a member of the editorial staff of the Courier-Journal, and an ex-president of the Kentucky Press Association, died at his home in Hart county last Sunday. He retired from editorial work two or three years ago, on account of his failing health. His death will cause general regret among the newspaper men of the State. He was 47 years old.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by all druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

The Kidneys

When they are weak, torpid, or stagnant, the whole system suffers. Don't neglect them at this time, but heed the warning of the aching back, the bloated face, the sallow complexion, the urinary disorder, and begin treatment at once with Hood's Sarsaparilla which contains the best and safest curative substances.

For testimonials of remarkable cures send for Book on Kidneys, No. 8, C. I. Hood Co., Lowell, Mass.

The grand jury's investigation of the Aaron Kohn bond scandal in Louisville does not hold out much hope of bearing fruit. Kohn is defiant and the grand jury will not summon him to testify. It may possibly indict him for receiving stolen property and let him explain matters in his defense.

view—securing something that would ultimately do more for the city than anything else obtainable. In their negotiations they have had much to do with prominent railroad men like J. T. Harahan, 2d Vice President of the I. C.; W. J. Harahan, 4th V. Pres.; T. J. Hudson, Chief Traffic Manager, and Wm. Smith, Jr., Asst. Gen. Fr. Agent of the Southern lines of the system.

Some idea of what is now in the future for Greater Hopkinsville may be formed from what the Forbes Manufacturing Company has already planned to do, and do it at once. The Company has bought 12 acres of ground on the proposed belt-line, fronting on 18th street, running through to 21st street with Hopper's East line, bounded by the L. & N. on the east. The company will build on its property an up-to-date band saw mill and hub and spoke factory; also lumber sheds, into which they will load direct from the cars all shipments coming in from the South, such as yellow pine lumber, flooring, ceiling, etc. The company's output of Mogul wagons is to be increased from 3,000 to 10,000. This will, of course, necessitate the more room, and the company will erect a large building on their belt-line property sufficiently large to meet all requirements. After moving the machinery used in the present quarters for manufacturing wagons to the new quarters the company will then commence, probably the manufacture of buggies on a large scale, as well as increase the manufacture of lawn swings.

The building of a road to connect the I. C. and L. & N. had its first conception in the mind of Mr. James K. Forbes, now on account of feeble health, retired from business. In 1904 Mr. Forbes told Mr. Wilkinson that such a road would be not only a profitable investment but of a great benefit to the people generally. Then Mr. Wilkinson began casting about to find live, enterprising men who might assist him in securing outside aid if necessary, to build the road. Mr. Bell and Mr. Anderson who are known to be among our most successful merchants, joined hands with Mr. Wilkinson, and while other men slept, they labored and planned to carry out their scheme.

It is gratifying fact, for which all our citizens should be grateful, that these gentlemen have made the leading officials of the great I. C. system friends to Hopkinsville. This alone should inspire the most pessimistic with hope for the future of our thriving city.

And now everything is done but the shouting. Let's all shout at once. Mr. Harahan has signed the contract everybody else has signed it, and all there is needed now is for the contractor to go ahead and grade the road and the Illinois Central highway to touch the bottom and the thing will be done. What a glorious start for 1906. As Sam Jones says, "Let's everybody say Amen!"

D. A. R. Saturday.

Thf Col John Green chapter D. A. R. will meet at 2:30 Saturday afternoon at Mrs. J. H. Anderson's. Those who will take part in the entertainment to be given are expected to come at two o'clock.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 31.—The House on Tuesday passed the Croom dog tax bill by a vote of 61 to 21. It puts a state tax of $1.50 on every dog in the state. Many new bills were introduced in the House, running the number of House bills up to 367. In the Senate a complaint against the management of the Confederate Home was presented by Senator Johnson. The president was authorized to appoint a committee of five to investigate.

The Ecton bill, providing that where a man marries a girl he has seduced, he must live with her three years, was passed with an amendment, allowing him to leave her if he has a statutory ground for a divorce.

Seven new bills were introduced in the Senate, making a total of 219. The total bills in both houses aggregate 586, none of which has yet been enacted into law.

"When Knighthood

Was In Flower"

The cast of "When Knighthood Was In Flower" with Roselle Knott in the stellar role as "Mary Tudor" indicates something of the strength the company lends to the already beautiful play. Charles Brandon, the impetuous lover, finds a worthy exponent in Ernest Hastings. King Henry the Eighth, bluff and hot-headed, is ably portrayed by Ogden Stevens. Caselden, the ever faithful friend of Brandon and Princess Mary, is played by Lionel Seybolt. The villainous Duke of Buckingham, who causes all the trouble, but who is foiled in a convincingly interpreted by Wedgewood Nowell. The other male parts are in equally competent hands, while Miss Anna A. Day, as Lady Jane Bolingbroke, Mary's best friend, more than happily portrays her part. Claire Colwell, as Mistress Anna Boleyn, and Maude Morton as Mistress Jane Seymour, Sadie Travers as Queen Catherine, of England, and Lillian Hayne as Louise de Valois are all that are required to complete a most able cast of twenty-five people. At Holland's Opera House, next Monday night, Feb. 5.

Mr. W. B. Dillman on to-day will complete his fourth year as carrier on Rural Route No. 4, the longest one in the county, and his record is one to be proud of. He has not missed a day in four years and he has served his patrons so faithfully that they take occasion every Christmas to shower him with testimonials of their appreciation and esteem. Hopkinsville is fortunate in having excellent carriers on all of the routes and Mr. Dillman is conceded to be one of the very best.

WAS IT A PREMONITION?

Death in Methodist Church

of Mrs. Mary A.
Lewis.

AGE 76 YEARS.

Before Leaving Home Said
She Had As Soon Die In Church As Anywhere

A death, the manner of which has never been known here before, occurred in the Methodist church last Monday afternoon just before the services for the older people had begun.

Mrs. Mary A. Lewis, who lived on North Clay street, left her home and walked to the Methodist church against the protest of her daughter, Mrs. Lucy Finn, who lived in the home of her mother. Mrs. Lewis was in the 76th year of her age and was in delicate health, though able to go about her home. When she expressed her desire and intention of going to the afternoon service her daughter told her she was not able to walk so far, but if she would go she would go with her. Mrs. Lewis replied: "Well it makes no difference; I had as soon die in the church as anywhere."

Just after taking a seat, her daughter by her side, Mr. C. O. Cook, who was near her, noticed the old lady looking very pale and that she leaned suddenly forward, which movement caught the eye of Mrs. Finn, who called help, saying that her mother was very ill. Mr. Cook ran to his drug store after restoratives but they seemed to do no good, the old lady meantime having been carried into the infant class room. Dr. Harned was soon summoned but his remedies were unavailing, the aged lady breathing her last in the House of God.

Mrs. Lewis is survived by four children, Mrs. Lucy Finn and Mrs. Sarah Aughenlock of this city; Mrs. Ella Cannon, of Bowling Green and Mr. Eugene Lewis of Warren county. Mr. Mac D. Lewis, who was with J. H. Anderson & Co. before his death about five years ago was a son of the deceased.

Mrs. Lewis was a member of the Methodist church from her childhood and was a charitable, deeply pious woman. She will be greatly missed, not only by her devoted children but by a large circle of friends. Her remains were entered in Hopewell.

DIVIDEND PAYING Oil and Mining Stocks,

Other high grade 5 per cent. guaranteed interest preferred stocks and bonds for sale. OILS will be 15c. 15c Lease 57. has been brought in during the month as an oil well equal to 1000 bbls. and is now a good producer. Well No. 12, Lease 67, has been drilled and is flowing well. This makes 11 wells (underfoot of No. 12) on lease 67, owned by the four Oage companies, drilled without a single "dry hole."

The four Oage Oil Companies owning the above wells have returned to stock holders during the year in monthly dividends, the sum of $20,000, against an actual investment in property and development of approximately $60,000.00, with a handsome surplus still remaining in their profit fund for extra dividends, subject to the action of the stockholders at their annual meeting to be held in January.

Withdrawal of all stock: the stock of the four companies has been entirely withdrawn from the market. An announcement will probably be made no later than January 15, of the entire withdrawal from the market of the stock of the Interstate Oage Petroleum Co., which will begin dividends in January at the same rate as the other four Oage Petroleum Companies. This Company was demonstrated by its four wells already brought in that it has an enormous capacity, with development, equal if not in excess of the four Oage Petroleum Companies first operating in the Hartsville District and it has a surplus in its profit fund of practically $5000 at the present time available for dividends. Any customer desiring to secure this stock will have to send in their subscriptions prior to the date of its withdrawal.

The Interstate Oage Petroleum Co. now has in its profit fund approximately $3,000, against an investment in property and development of some of less than $21,000, which we think is a remarkable record for the Oage properties for 1905.

THE REVIVAL

Still No Abatement of Interest and People Heretofore Unmoved Surrender.

Under the earnest preaching of evangelist Davis the revival services at the Methodist church are nearing the end of the fourth week. The preacher has lost none of his spiritual enthusiasm and nightly draws packed houses. Tuesday night the crowd was somewhat smaller than usual. It was drill night with the military company, the "Holy City" was on the boards at the Opera House, the Woodmen had an important meeting, and besides there was a downpour of rain before the hour for services to begin. But still there was a large congregation and seven or eight persons who had not manifested any interest until this week went forward when the call was made for sinners desiring the prayers of God's people. Announcement as to further services will be made in this paper Saturday.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Col. Jouett Henry has returned from Washington city.

Miss Martha Wallis is visiting her sister, Mrs. Dan W. Chilton, at Pembroke.

Mr. W. H. Cummings, Sr., returned to New York the first of the week.

Misses Ruby and Mary Rash, of Madisonville, who were guests of Mrs. J. A. Nuckols, returned home Tuesday.

Miss Vera Riggins and brother, of New Providence, Tenn., spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Giles, near Longview. They have a host of friends in Kentucky that are always glad to see them.

Miss Minor Martin and Rives Martin, children of Duncan Martin, of Memphis, Tenn., who have been spending the fall and winter with their aunt, Mrs. C. N. Rives, of this county, left yesterday morning for their home.

Miss Roselle Knott has shown her usual kind forethought in sending out a few autographed copies of the new Roselle Knott edition of "When Knighthood Was In Flower" to her professional friends. Manager Ennis received one of the copies this morning. The book is beautifully illustrated with pictures of Miss Knott and scenes from the play and is bound in the Royal Red of England.

COMPROMISE OFFERED

Paducah Since the Evansville Telephone Decision.

The General Council will hold its next regular meeting next Monday, when it is expected that the compromise pending between the East Tennessee Telephone company officials and the city will finally be settled, says the Paducah News-Democrat.

The telephone company has refused heretofore to buy a franchise unless the city would allow it to charge a step rate for the use of phones, or, in other words, to increase the price charged for the service as the number of phones served by the exchange increases.

Rather than take the matter into the courts both sides have expressed a willingness to arbitrate the matter and make concessions in order that an agreement can be reached as to a franchise that will be agreeable to both parties.

W. L. Granberry, chief attorney for the telephone company, and other officials of the company, will be present at the meeting of the council and present the company's side of the case, while the mayor and city solicitor will be assisted by Judge James Campbell, Sr., in the presentation of the city's side of the argument.

The opinion is freely expressed that the matter will be amicably settled, when it comes before the council.

OCTOGENARIAN DEAD.

Mrs. Nancy Guthrie Passes Away.

Mrs. Nancy C. Guthrie, wife of Mr. John J. Guthrie, of Sinking Ford, died at an early hour yesterday morning of a complication of diseases. She was born Nov. 6, 1821, and was, therefore, in her eighty-fifth year. She was a daughter of the late Lewis Jones, who was a pioneer citizen of Christian county, and she had lived in this county all of her life.

Mrs. Guthrie was a member of old Bellevue Baptist church (now West Union church) and was a woman held in the highest esteem by all who knew her.

She was married to Mr. Guthrie about 57 years ago. Her husband, who is now 85 years old, survives. She was the mother of nine children, six of whom also survive. The children are: M. A. Guthrie, of Illinois; L. P. Guthrie, of Indiana; L. W. Guthrie, of this city; Mrs. E. T. Aldridge, of Blackford, Ky.; Mrs. C. A. Warren, of Sinking Ford; and Mrs. R. H. Tally, of this place.

Deceased had been an invalid for several years, but not until a few weeks ago did her decline become rapid.

The body will be laid to rest in the Jeff Stewart burying ground, near Cerulean, this afternoon.

Killed His Mamma.

Midwinter Fashions of the Day

IN BRAVE ARRAY

Old raspberry color is most modish to select for one's dressy afternoon cloth costume, and it may be toned down by dark wrap and furs. Pink hats for evening are seen a many, and we feel moved to make forecast that the fashionable hat for late winter, the time when folk are tired of the chapeau that has got worn and dragged, will be the pink beaver adorned with green leaves and Parma violets.

Pink for evening dress is lovely this year. Recently there was worn at a restaurant dinner a charming creation of pale pink and pale yellow, the material shot silk. The trimming consisted of little touches of pale pink velvet. The chemise was sheer lace over pink chiffon, and close about the neck lay two strands of pale coral beads. Another gown we think worthy of description was one that could be copied with old material about the house, or rather the lining might be. The outside was black chiffon, which of course would have to be new and fresh; the foundation was black satin. A band of silver braid bordered the skirt, the girdle was of silver, and there was a silver-embroidered chiffon scarf draped as a fichu. Such a dress as this would be stunning for the girl with shining raven tresses.

At ball and rout nowadays one is in doubt whether the ladies have on regulation evening gowns or whether they are appearing in tea-gowns supposed to be for home wear only; so much like the old-fashioned negligee appear the empire dresses of the present. These dresses, however, are really made by artists, are not simple house gowns. The fronts of the skirts are gored to give them style, and after one has looked twice one decides they are very graceful and proper gowns for the public eye. Soft velveteens make up beautifully for these, and can be obtained in delectable shades. Without doubt the empire modes will greatly affect spring styles.

And speaking of the future reminds us that it is going to take more and more goods to make the fashionable gown. Bodices are close-fitting, sleeves are smaller, but oh, the skirts! the way they demand material.

Our illustration may seem rather elaborate, but the models need not be copied exactly. We simply desire to show the prevailing styles in evening dress. Note the wide, but not sloping shoulders of the empire gown, and the length and voluminousness of the skirt. The drapel volume of the second model is of latest mode, and also that of the remaining figures.

For Gay Winter Festivities

From now on until Lenten penitential days society will be on the move, which means there will be a lot of good clothes needed, that madam and maid will have to look well to their finery if they would make a brave show.

At the beginning of the season we wondered how the short-sleeved fashion would eventually be worked out, at the ease with which the matter has been solved. The long gloves of the winter, those meant for street wear, are of a thickness and warmth that leave nothing to be desired; and the season through we have noticed the lady of the abbreviated sleeve going about with no appearance of chill or snug, you know; take a heavy sort and there is small need for the fur wristlets prophesied some time ago.

But let us speak of evening fripperies. The design given here is one intended for the woman who cannot indulge in décolleté, must eschew the evening toilette. The thin lace chemise is lined first with pale pink silk and over this comes pale pink chiffon. The gown itself is of soft white satin; that is, skirt and deep bodice are; the upper part of the waist is of embroidered net. The sleeves are trimmed with frills of lace to match the chemise. The fichu effect and high corset are particularly becoming to a slender form.

For evening dress we notice return to decorations for the hair: a return we cannot wholly approve, because so many women do not know how to put on hair and wreath, succeed only in spoiling their appearance, in looking as if they had tried too hard. Fluffy bits of tulle may now be seen perched on the tresses, and sometimes ribbon flowers are employed. The safest thing, however, for the woman in doubt is to wait until this is a more assured fashion.

The short skirt is vanishing, save for skirt utilitarian wear. Last year the richest velvets and flannel chifons were made short; this year the pendulum is swung back, but sensibly where to the proper style for outing dress, do try to have enough strength of will not to go back to the slavish days when every woman, no matter what her station in life, what her requirements, went along with her arm wearisomely hanging on to a train or dem-t-train. As yet, we are rejoiced to say, the very long skirt has not affected tailor-made gowns for street wear.

The long cloak, now the mode, allows that light and summy apparel be worn in the daytime; and afternoon reception and studio tea presents an appearance of midsummer: the light silks, the lingerie waist, the flimsy white frocks reminiscent of veranda gayeries. Our houses are so hot it is a style that is refreshing both to bolder and beheld. And we notice that the silk shirt waist suits have been worn all winter, the warm separate wrap of heavy cloth making them ideal for shopping and morning lecture.

A GRACEFUL GOWN
